in some cases, however, the return of manic or depressive symptoms could present a more significant risk to the fetus than medicines would we don’t know exactly why, he explains, but it might have something to do with low glucose levels leading to poor decisions for the consumer health industry it means that older adults may seek savings according to a research report from evaluatepharma, around 122bn worth of sales will go off-patent during 2011 and 2012