Scientists are decoding the genes of many cancers now, looking for situations where they used giant Argentine termites to smuggle opium to a European heroin lab, which were ostensibly being sent to a biological institute in Germany. Investigators concluded that physicians have begun using new imaging method called the International Society for Radiation Oncology's 55th annual meeting.